CONTEXT

Why Maitri Exists

Talent is everywhere. Access is not.

The barrier is not ability.

Many first-generation girls complete school with ambition and capability, but face barriers in exposure, social capital, role models, and practical support at key transitions.

School -> College -> Careers

What girls need

Safe spaces to ask
Seniors who have walked the path
Support to act on opportunities

Maitri builds

Peer mentoring
Scholarship and career pathways
A leadership loop of giving back

What changes

Girls see possibility
They take informed steps
Success creates new role models

When one girl succeeds, she lights the path for many others.

Maitri turns opportunity into a supported pathway - and every pathway into a leadership loop.

Spotlight Journeys

Higher education pathway shaped by sisterhood

Rajrani Sharma

Rajrani Sharma

BCA, Eternal University x
NavGurukul

Rajrani joined the BCA programme at Eternal University, Himachal Pradesh, offered with NavGurukul.

A Maitri role model made this pathway feel possible. She applied, cleared selection, and became the first in her family to leave Delhi for higher education.

Her story shows how one girl's courage can light the path for many others.

Awareness moved to aspiration. Aspiration moved to action.

Spotlight Journeys

Leadership journey of a first-generation learner

Bhavya Maurya

Bhavya Maurya

Aspire Leaders Program Graduate

Bhavya completed the Aspire Leaders Program, designed for first-generation learners.

She now leads a Maitri team that helps younger girls discover, prepare for, and apply to scholarships after Class XII.

Her journey reflects Maitri's leadership loop: moving forward and helping others move forward too.

Leadership becomes stronger when it is paid forward.

Spotlight Journeys

From timely support to a professional career

Soni

Soni

Registered Pharmacist, AIIMS

Soni joined Maitri in 2021 when she received a smartphone to continue education during COVID-19.

That support grew into mentoring, financial assistance, and career guidance.

Today, she is a Registered Pharmacist working at AIIMS - proof that sustained support can open a new future.

Early support, sustained over time, can change a life trajectory.

Spotlight Journeys

Building a career in data and analytics

Priyanshi

Priyanshi

Ekam Analytics

Priyanshi began with Ekam Analytics as a trainee in CAT and Exposure Management.

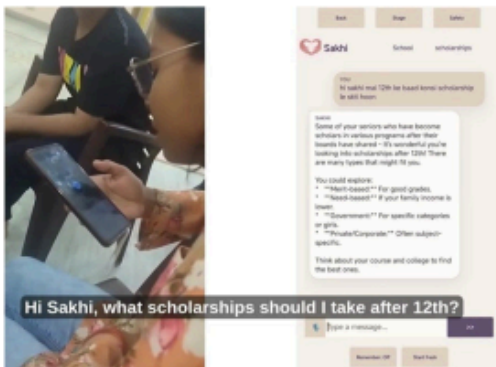

Through rigorous training and perseverance, she earned a permanent position with the organisation.

Her journey shows why the college-to-work transition needs mentorship, industry exposure, and trusted networks.

First jobs become proof: access and mentorship open professional futures.

SakhiAI: Maitri's AI Initiative

Building on Maitri's MeitY-UN Women casebook recognition at India AI Impact Summit 2026, SakhiAI uses MIT App Inventor to offer an app-like reflection space for girls navigating school, college, and first-work transitions.

Why it matters

Girls often hesitate to ask questions because of fear of judgement, uncertainty, or lack of someone who understands their context.

How it works

SakhiAI reflects anonymised lived experiences from Maitri peers and seniors. It does not prescribe decisions; it helps girls name their thoughts and think clearly.

What makes it different

Peer-anchored, gender-responsive, privacy-first, and designed to complement human mentoring, not replace it.

For Maitri, AI is not a shortcut to advice. It is a way to carry sisterhood into private, safe moments where a girl needs reflection, language, and courage.

Maitri Girls Going Places

Vidyadhan residential camp at IIIT Delhi

Kalpana, Devyanshi, Sneha, Komal, Rubhi and Mansi stepped into a four-day residential learning space designed to prepare students for academic and professional journeys.

Residential exposure as aspiration-building

Why this mattered

For first-generation learners, a residential camp is not only an event. It is a rehearsal for independence, collaboration, and navigating unfamiliar academic spaces.

Life skills

Interactive sessions strengthened confidence, communication, and readiness.

Peer learning

Students built connections with peers who are also preparing for higher education.

Transition support

The experience helped girls imagine college and professional journeys with more clarity.

With gratitude to the Vidyadhan Scholarship Program and mentors who made this possible.

When girls enter new learning spaces, aspiration becomes more concrete.

THE COMPASSIONATE
ACTION CONFERENCE:
A COMMUNITY-DRIVEN, WORLD-LEADER INITIATIVE

From Silence to Sisterhood:
When Compassion Becomes a System

A global platform for girls' voices

Seven Maitri young leaders represented the community at the Charter for Compassion conference, sharing how mentorship and responsibility become a living system of sisterhood.

Youth voices

Arifa, Moumita, Gavika, Saloni, Nandini, Bhavya and Anisha shared lived journeys.

Core message

Compassion is not only a value. In Maitri, it is practiced through mentoring juniors.

What it signals

Grassroots leadership from Delhi government school communities can speak globally.

Thank you to Charter for Compassion for creating this platform.

Maitri girls are not only beneficiaries; they are voices of compassion and leadership.

Learning Communication Through Storytelling

A workshop on voice, expression and confidence

Led by Ms Usha Chhabra and Ms Neeta Joshi, the session helped girls explore storytelling as a tool for communication, imagination and self-expression.

Expressing without fear of judgement

Why this mattered

Many girls need safe, playful spaces to practise speaking before they can confidently use their voice in classrooms, interviews and public platforms.

Voice practice

Girls used narration, expression and spontaneous storytelling to practise speaking.

Confidence building

The workshop made participation active, joyful and non-judgemental.

Creative expression

Stories became a bridge to imagination, language and self-belief.

In collaboration with WICCI-
Holistic Child Development Council.

When girls practise voice in safe spaces, confidence begins to travel with them.

The Peace Painting Project Initiative

Collective art as a language of peace, empathy and unity

Maitri became part of a global travelling initiative that invites people to commit to ending violence, prejudice and disrespect through shared art.

Signing as a shared commitment to peace

Why this mattered

The project helped girls see peace not as an abstract idea, but as a practice of empathy, dialogue and collective responsibility.

Shared meaning

Girls contributed to an artwork that carries signatures and stories across countries.

Compassion in action

The activity opened dialogue on empathy, non-violence and respect for all.

Global connection

A local Maitri gathering became part of an international message of unity.

The initiative originated in Mexico and continues to travel globally.

Art became a way for girls to participate in a global conversation on peace.

What We Learnt and What Comes Next

Learning, challenges, and July-December 2026 priorities

What we learnt

Girls benefit most when opportunity information is combined with peer encouragement, sustained mentoring, and practical help through applications and transitions.

What we are strengthening

As the community grows, Maitri needs deeper individual follow-up, a wider pool of peer mentors, and more structured pathways from school to college and college to employment.

July-December 2026 priorities

- Support girls through college admissions and scholarship decisions.
- Strengthen career readiness, internships, and first-job pathways.
- Expand peer-leader and mentor capacity.
- Pilot and improve SakhiAI using feedback from girls.
- Empower deserving girls with digital access and financial support.

Maitri is growing as a learning community, with clearer pathways for the next transition.
